Dear FCC,
I absolutely LOVE my satellite radio and want the service to continue. I enjoy the multitude of stations I can listen to and rely on the way I can listen to them anywhere I am. Living on in Philadelphia, I often drive to NYC or Washington DC and rely on the traffic and weather reports I can listen to en route. Most recently, I was able to take a detour route during the closure of many main vein streets for the March for Women's Lives in the Washington area. It only makes sense that the highly mobile people of today have access to highly mobile radio stations and reports.

Please do not underestimate the utility of satellite radio and discontinue your efforts to dictate what we are permitted to hear over the airwaves.

Thanks for your time,
